OLD TIMER HAD FEAR OF "RACKET" RACING

By J. W. MARCHBANK

"Nimrod was an early writer on outdoor sports, being an authority on fox hunting, but was a devotee of racing as well, contributing sprightly articles to the sporting press. In one of his more serious moments he expressed the opinion that the turf has one advantage over other sports in diffusing its pleasures far and wide. Truthfully he points out the owner of race horses cannot gratify his passion for the turf without affording delight to thousands upon thousands of the less fortunate of his countrymen.

The English expert saw the danger of the racing of his time being transformed into a racket—a good old word, by the way, and not of recent invention—and wrote earnestly in favor of limiting the ownership of horses to men who ran them purely for the sport of the thing and not for commercial purposes. Just as we have dividend-mad promoters in these days forgetting all about sport in their scramble for money, so there were abuses in those old times that stirred the righteous wrath of "Nimrod."

One way to keep the sport on the high plane at which I have always aimed is to get rid of a lot of the hokey that is spread around, especially since the radio has been put to such wide use in advertising racing. Only recently John L. O'Connor, long known as an authority on the thoroughbred, wrote of his admiration for the broadcasting of Ed Johnstone at various tracks. In regard to Johnstone's talks, O'Connor says:

"For all my attentive listening, never has my ear caught ballyhooing of racetracks or mention of individuals, or of speculation."

The broadcaster confines himself to the thoroughbred and people who have been fortunate enough to hear him say he knows the thoroughbred's history, his home, his virtues and that he fills the listener with reverence before the miracles of breeding.

Let's hasten the day when there are more of the type of the broad-minded broadcaster and not so many of the ballyhoo kind on the air.

DEPARTMENT OF ENGINEERING WILL FUNCTION AS USUAL

Supervisor Al Witt Succeeds In Having Gas Tax Moneys Due County From State Released.

The County Engineering Department will function as usual without fear of a complete shutdown, due to the efforts of Supervisor Al Witt this week.

The supervisor went to Sacramento, where he made possible the release of more than $50,000 gas tax money due the county, but which was held up by the state since November 1, due to a faulty report of last year's expenditures.

Supervisor Witt was promised release of the tax moneys this week by Director Earl Lee Kelly after he assured the official that a majority of the Board of Supervisors would sign a certification of the report which was rendered by former engineer Carl R. Scott with the proviso that a notation would be affixed to the document stating that the board had nothing to do with the report.

The report, according to Kelly, showed extravagance in expenditures. "We want it understood clearly," said Witt, "that the report was that of Mr. Scott and that the board had nothing to do with it."

If the gas tax moneys were not available, Engineer U. S. Marshall said, the engineering department would have had to shut down, leaving many county employees jobless for the holiday season.

CITIZENS URGED TO AID IN BATTLE ON TUBERCULOSIS

Christmas Seals Are Now Being Distributed To Raise Funds To Fight Dread Malady.

Families in hundreds of thousands of California homes will receive their Christmas seals at Thanksgiving, from the sixty-five tuberculosis associations and committees affiliated with the California Tuberculosis Association.

Continuing a custom that is now almost traditional in American life, from Thanksgiving until Christmas these Christmas seals appear and they will make their silent plea for aid for the tuberculous. For more than a quarter of a century these little seals have been waging war against the disease.

The romance of the mail service and its historical growth is chosen as the subject for the 1935 Christmas seal. The little girl in Civil War costume is about to mail a letter in one of the first post boxes we had in this country. These were placed on the gas lamp posts in some of the largest communities. For a time they were called "lamp-boxes." This year's Christmas seal pays tribute to the heroism and courage of the countless couriers of the mail, and it is truly fitting that the tiny health seal, which always symbolizes a united desire to control tuberculosis, should commemorate this important service, which has done so much for the welfare of our citizens.

These little Christmas seals have kept pace with the growth of the mail service in this country. At Christmas time they have decorated the letters of greeting and millions of letters, and with their gayly colored symbolism of health and good will have joined in the spirit of Yule Tide and the New Year.

During the coming year hundreds of Californians will be protected from tuberculosis by applying all the means that science has shown in the battle against the disease.

THREE WAY CRASH DUE TO DRUNK DRIVING

Cars Pile Up On Mission Street As Result Of Too Much Booze

About 11 o'clock, last Saturday evening, Carl R. Dahl, 25, 1197 Guerrero street, drove his car into those of Dr. J. Celentano, 30, 5869 Mission street, and Barney Bernard, 31, 1768 Hayes street, all of San Francisco. The accident occurred on Mission and Flounroy street.

Dahl, who was traveling south on Mission street, and who is alleged to have been intoxicated, struck the machine of Dr. Celentano as he drove it onto Mission street from Flounroy street. Dahl's car careened along the street and struck the car driven by Barney Bernard, which had stopped to allow traffic to pass through from Crocker avenue and Flounroy street.

Officer Arthur Dalton, who was directing traffic, narrowly missed being struck in the piling up of the wrecked automobiles.

Dahl was arrested on a charge of reckless driving and taken to the local jail, where bail was set at $50, by Judge Wade H. Clay. Being unable to furnish bail, he remained in jail until the time of hearing, which was set for Tuesday of this week.

Defendant was fined $25. No one was injured.

WHAT JOKE IS THIS? IT IS TO LAUGH!

In an article under the caption, "Daly City Ban On Gambling," the Call-Bulletin prints the following quoted paragraphs:

"We went even further than to close present gambling places," said Mayor Hugh H. Smith today. "We returned to John T. Sullivan $2000 he had paid on an annual fee of $4000 for a permit to operate a bingo parlor on Mission street at Templeton avenue."

"Sullivan planned to build an imposing building to house his bingo games. Gambling in all forms, including punch boards, slot machines, bookmaking and lotteries, must cease in Daly City."

Some citizens are now wondering if the petition of some 460 voters did not have something to do with the sudden change of attitude of four councilmen to return this fee, after having a few weeks previously voted to grant a permit for a "bingo" parlor here. Or it may have been just a "natural."

BASEBALL GAME SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The Daly City Tanforan team will play the Del Monte Creamery Nine at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Harrison diamond, Seventh and Harrison streets.

The local boys are now in a tie for the AA Winter League leadership, with five games won and one loss.

OPPONENTS OF NEW DEAL "UP IN THE AIR"

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

In an extremely pertinent rejoinder to a speech of former president Herbert Hoover in New York, the San Francisco News points out a number of things the sage of Palo Alto forgot the editorial writer had finished his analysis Hoover hadn't a logical leg to stand on.

The ex-president was especially vociferous in his denunciation of the New Deal's "planned scarcity." As to that, Hoover forgot that his own administration was the first to urge cotton farmers to plow under every third or fourth row, that his Farm Board tried to make crops scarce by buying up farm surpluses, and that his Hawley-Smoot tariff raised the banners of "planned scarcity," high prices and monopoly over every factory of the land.

How now, Mr. ex-president? You also talked about the New Deal tending to raise the cost of living. Suppose living costs declined almost 25 per cent in your administration, there was a large proportion of the population without money to meet those costs.

The cost of living, high or low, means little to citizens who are lacking the wherewithal to meet them.

Another thing. The Hoover administration piled up a net deficit of about five billions, while expending hardly anything for direct relief and at the beginning of the depression he made the treasury's deficit greater by persuading Congress to reduce income taxes.

In mentioning the Hawley-Smoot tariff it may be said the new United States-Canadian reciprocity treaty is a step toward undoing the commercial damage done by that ill-advised law. President Roosevelt is hopeful the new treaty will more than double our trade with Canada and we heartily second that hope.

Canada buys more from us than all Latin America or all Asia and it is of the highest importance we should treat our northern neighbor in the fairest manner possible. As a matter of direct information, it may be said that treaty goes into effect January first and is for a period of three years.

It is expected every section of this country will benefit from the reductions in import duties up on the northern border and that the Canadians will derive a corresponding benefit by sending more goods to us. Canada is this country's second best customer, being exceeded only by the United Kingdom, and the United States buys more from Canada than from any other nation.

A conservative estimate is to the effect the value of the output from the mining industry of Canada for 1935 will be 8 per cent more than that of 1934. The estimate has been placed at $300,000,000 compared with $278,000,000 last year. The figures has only once before been exceeded in the history of the industry, in 1929, when the total reached $311,000,000.

Gold output for this year is estimated at $112,000,000 with gold at of Canada. In British Columbia the $35 an ounce. That is for the whole lode gold produced is estimated at $12,900,000 and placer gold at $808,000.

The opinion is being expressed once more by well-informed people that a further increase in the price of gold may come soon. It may not materialize for some months, however.

WOMAN IS HURT WHEN ALIGHTING FROM STEET CAR

Holding To Hand Rail After Stepping To Pavement Results In Painful Injuries.

As she alighted from an interurban car at 6843 Mission street, about 6:20 o'clock, Friday evening of last week, Mrs. A. Holms, a resident in the Mission Auto Camp, sustained painful injuries.

Mrs. Holms held on to the hand rail of the street car after she stepped to the safety zone, and looked around to see whether she could safely cross the street. The car started up and she was thrown to the pavement.

Officer Hopman and A. Banfield assisted the injured woman, to her home. Later that evening she received treatment at the Villa Sanatorium. No bones were broken, but the patient is suffering from painful bruises and severe shock.

COUNCIL MOVES TO ELIMINATE ALL FIREWORKS

Ordinance To Repeal "Bingo" Privilege Passed On Second Reading—Other Matters Given Consideration.

The City Council of Daly City met in regular session, Monday evening of this week, with all members present.

A communication from the League of Municipalities announced the next meeting will be held at San Bruno, Thursday, December 19. Members of the council were invited to attend. It was suggested the city purchase a book in which addresses before the recent convention appear. Concurred in.

A communication from the Community Welfare Association voiced commendation of the stand taken by Councilman Fahey on the "bingo" matter.

A certified copy from the State Department of Highways relinquished a certain portion of San Pedro road and School street to the city.

Eaton & Smith presented a petition, signed by 21 property owners, asking to be allowed to improve portions of certain streets, which was granted. It was suggested local labor be employed as much as possible on this project. The council voted to have the city finish its portion of the work on Citrus avenue to the west line of Niantic avenue.

Ordinance No. 195, being an act to repeal the recently enacted and much discussed "Bingo" ordinance, was read for the second time and adopted by unanimous vote of the council.

The chairman of the ordinance committee was instructed, in collaboration with the city attorney, to draw a general rezoning ordinance for presentation at the next regular meeting of the council. Chairman Fahey announced the committee will meet on Tuesday evening of next week.

A new plumbing ordinance was ordered to be prepared.

Mayor Smith made several motions to instruct the police department to strictly enforce laws regarding the two o'clock closing, operation of slot machines, vending machines involving an element of chance, bookmaking establishments and all forms of gambling of whatever nature within

NEW ERA CO-OP HEARS SPEAKERS

Encouraged by the advice given by their speakers, Mr. A. F. Walther (retail grocer) and Mr. Warfield of the Producer Consumer Co-operative in San Francisco, at the New Era Co-op meeting last Friday evening, the officers and members of the Daly City unit feel they will be able to open their co-operative store in the near future.

Mr. Walther and Mr. Warfield made the evening an unusual one for the audience, by each being such a distinctively different type of speaker. The serious Mr. Warfield gave a clear-spoken, slow, yet forceful speech; only to be followed in direct contrast by the faster, gayer, more fiery speaking Mr. Walther.

Using gestures, and talking with a slight accent, the earnest Mr. Walther drove his words home when he said, "God meant the people of this earth to live in equality, to live by mutual helpfulness instead of by greed." And, when he asked, "But is it equality when only 2 per cent of the people of the United States hold the controlling wealth of the nation?"

"Teach your people," continued Mr. Walther, "that greed does not enter into the co-operative plan. True co-operation is a plan of universality and unity, with no discrimination between race, color or creed. It is not only a plan for collective buying and selling of commodities; but an ideal to be worked up to, and upheld, that will eliminate the greed and the concentrated profit of the present capitalistic system."

Sugar Causes Brilliant Leaf Colors of Autumn

It's not an early frost, as commonly supposed, that produces the most colorful autumn leaves, says the United States Forest Service. It's a late frost—and the sugar in the leaf—that gives us the brilliant colors. Just the right combination of temperature and moisture is needed. The best colors come when the thermometer doesn't quite reach the freezing point for several weeks during the latter part of September and through October.

Silviculturists explain that before the leaves fall a layer of cells forms at the base of the leaf, which ultimately loosens the leaf, and when it drops off, forms a scar. If frost doesn't arrive too soon, this layer forms early and quickly. It holds more sugar in the leaf and the sweet sap causes the brilliant reds and oranges and yellows that delight the eye. This is not only true of the gorgeous sugar maples in the north, but of most of the colorful hardwood trees—the oaks, elms, birches, oaks, maples, sweet gum, black gum, hickory, dogwood, and many others. When frost comes too early the leaves dry and lose their sugar before they have time to take on high color.

Slot Machine Messages

Making or cancelling engagements is easy for the user of a device known as the "Notifier," developed in England for use in railway stations and stores and at large public gatherings, says Popular Science Monthly. By stepping upon a small platform and dropping a coin in a slot, the patron exposes a slowly moving paper roll on which he may write a message to a friend. The message remains in view for two hours. Several rolls are provided on the machine, so that a large number of messages can be accommodated. Such messages include explanations for unkept appointments.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilith; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows her contempt for Garth.

The plane nosed down so steeply that the pontoons went under. Fortunately the craft was almost fool-proof. She bobbed up without plunging to the bottom. Huxby taxied shoreward against the current from the stream and the thrust of the down-gulch breeze.

Garth stood up to pilot the plane. A clump of spruces stood a few yards in from the water-smoothed ledge on the right bank of the stream mouth. Huxby obeyed the signal to shut off the motor. As the propeller ceased to spin the plane glided in between the banks of the outrushing stream.

Uncoupling the line as he went, Garth ran out on the right wing. From the overhang he leaped down on the shelf ledge and bounded along it to the nearest spruce. The plane had already lost its headway and was starting to drift backwards in the swift outswirl of the stream.

The line tautened as Garth whipped it around the tree trunk. To make doubly safe, he used the last foot for a pair of half hitches. He knew what would happen if the plane should drift free with no pilot aboard.

Snubbed fast, the monoplane swung to the near bank and lay with the right-hand float snug against the polished waterline of the ledge. Huxby came out on the wing and jumped off to peer down the glassy slope of rock at the pontoon.

"Not so bad," he admitted. "I had the plane picked out," Garth replied. "The rock is very slick. There'll be no need of fenders during our few hours' stay."

The engineer pilot shoved his goggles up on the front of his helmet. "How's that? 'Picked out,' you say. Been around airplanes, have you?" "I know how rough stone will chafe a boat," Garth replied. "Your floats are a kind of canoe. Can you get Mr. Ramill and his daughter ashore by way of the wing?"

Miss Ramill called from the cabin: "Why didn't you pick a decent landing place, Vivian? We never can get ashore up this smooth sloping rock. The steps are no use. You'll have to make a gangway for Dad and me."

Garth vaulted upon the wing and walked in along it to the fuselage. The girl leaned from the big rear window of the cabin. "Give me your hand," Garth said. "I'll swing you up on the wing."

He knelt above her on the cabin roof and reached down. Her lips curled in a contemptuous smile.

"If that's the best you can do, I'll stay right here. I've no wish to go bathing."

"In that case, get out of the way. Your father wishes to see my prospect. I'll not waste time building a needless gangway."

She was the heiress to millions and had been reared in prodigious luxury. Never had she been treated so cavalierly as by this buckskin-clad prospector. She turned to her fiancé.

"Vivian, you heard the insolent fellow!"

Huxby grasped the wing tip to pull himself up. The girl's father spoke over her shoulder: "Stay where you are, Vivian. We're here to look at Garth's mine. He has agreed to help Lilith and me ashore. If she prefers to remain aboard, she may do so."

The girl looked both surprised and angered. She drew back into the cabin. Her father thrust out his head from the window to look up at Garth.

"Won't it be more than you can manage? I weigh over two hundred." For reply, Garth reached down. The portly millionaire hung in Garth's grasp almost like a dead weight. Yet Garth swung him bodily up and around on the wing.

He led the limping gentleman out to the far end, near the tip, and lowered him down upon the top of the ledge. Before he could follow, Miss Ramill called out to him: "Come back for me. It should be safe enough. You did not drop Dad."

Garth looked up the gulch, smiled, and went to swing the girl out of the window. Up on the wing she clutched his shoulder as if to steady herself. Her scarlet-smeared lips curved in a patronizing smile.

"You're wonderfully strong!" "More knuck than muscle."

"Both! It was simply marvelous how you lifted Dad without losing your balance."

Out near the wing tip Garth drew his arm free from her clasp, caught her by the elbows, and lowered her into Huxby's upthrust hands.

She looked up and smiled. "So nice of you, old dear. Now, if you'll fetch a cup. I'm dying to try a drink of this delightful-looking milky water."

"The dying would be more apt to follow your drink," Garth replied. He sprang down beside her father. "Your milk is rock-flour ground off by the glacier. It's apt to be a dangerous drink. There's clear water where we're going."

He caught up his rifle, and set off aslant the easy upslope from the lake shore. The others followed after him, picking their way between the scraggy branches of the spruce trees. Before long the trees dwarfed down into timberline scrub.

"What an odd-colored stone!" The girl turned to stare resentfully at the desolate grandeur of the mountains across the valley. "Did you ever see such a horrible place? It's almost as bad as those ash-heap mountains in the Mohave desert. Come along, Dad. Don't keep us here forever. This raw hole makes me sick."

Her father spoke irritably: "You wouldn't listen when I advised you to remain at Edmonton. Why didn't you stay in the cabin, instead of following me ashore?"

"Oh, tune off," she complained. "It's quite enough to've dragged myself out on this God-forsaken dirt pile. Even the berries are sour. I'm going back. There ought to be a dance program on somewhere. Only thing, can Vivian get me up into the cabin?"

He looked expectantly at Garth. The smile she gave him jerked the attention of her fiancé away from the purpose that had brought them ashore.

"I'll swing you aboard easy enough, Lilith," he said.

Garth spoke to him without a trace of amusement:

"If you ask me, I think this little walk to the mine would be good exercise for Miss Ramill. When I left here, last month, there was a she-grizzly with two cubs back along the lake shore. They may have gone off; maybe not. That pistol of yours wouldn't be of much use if you happened to blunder between the old lady and her young ones."

"You saw the beast, yet did not kill her," scoffed Huxby. "Pretty thin!"

"Not at all; she was quite fat. It happened, though, I had no need of meat or bear skins. Also, she was as willing as I was to live and let live, just so I kept away from her cubs."

Mr. Ramill started to overtake him. "Lead ahead, Garth. I came here to see your prospect, not to talk about shooting."

Garth went on, up aslant the tundra. When he came to where the smooth slope dropped into a shallow trough, a backward glance showed the girl and Huxby loitering along behind her father. The portly millionaire came panting up beside Garth.

"Well?" he asked.

"There's my claim," Garth answered. "My lower stake is down at that cross dyke of gneiss, a thousand feet or so from the lake shore. The upper one stands about three hundred feet below those slide ledges. You could stake a claim above mine, but I doubt if you'd find pay dirt. There is none at all between the lower stake and the lake. The dyke stopped the downdrift of the alloy. I sampled several acres. Beginning at the grass roots and going down to frost, the dirt ran from five to ten dollars a pan. This trough is a placer pocket—a cache filled by the age-long downdrift from those disintegrated veins up the mountain. My claim covers all or nearly all the deposit, and it is worth several hundred thousand dollars, if not a million."

The cool certainty of Garth's statement compelled belief. Mr. Ramill's ruddy face went blank.

His daughter looked at Garth with a sudden change from boredom and disdain to an interest that verged on respect. Here was sensation—something new. The despised woody vagabond of the wilds was not a pauper, after all! It was like a play, the wandering beggar boy disclosing himself to be the true prince. He had said, "a million!"

Like the older man, Huxby had put on his poker face. He was not so successful, however, in keeping the glint out of his eyes. He had yet to make his fortune.

"So it's a million?" he scoffed. "No wonder you prospectors go crazy. Find a little placer you guess has some gold in it, and you think you've located a mint. Five to ten dollars a pan! Why, Jack, your metal wouldn't give you half a dollar a pan, even if your small percentage of gold was alloyed with silver, instead of lead."

Garth smiled. "My mistake bothering you to test that sample. Just chew on this, my friend: A good many sourdoughs might not be able to identify that gray-white metal. But only a cheechako would be unable to recognize that it is not galena or silver."

This silenced the engineer for the moment. Mr. Ramill favored Garth with his blandest smile. "Technicians like Huxby are too apt to imagine that the rest of us know nothing. Now, admitting for the sake of the argument that your guess regarding the alloy is correct, suppose we sample your prospect."

For reply, Garth led down into the trough to where a moss-bedded spring trickled down from pool to pool. He stopped beside a shallow dugout, roofed with spruce branches, moss and dirt. Under it lay a small shovel and pickax, a worn gold pan, and a little aluminum cooking pot.

Garth turned to Huxby. "There's the pan. Get your samples and go to it."

"How do I know your holes aren't salted?"

"You don't know anything. Why not scratch down to gravel yourself? Or perhaps I salted all the trough, before I laid on this blanket of grass and moss."

Mr. Ramill interposed: "Mining engineers have to guard against fraud as well as error, Garth. I was salted once myself, in my mallow days. Just to ease his professional conscience, suppose you clear gravel for us midway between here and the staked hole down there."

"That's my discovery stake," Garth replied. "Wasn't looking for gold in this trough. Just happened to notice the gray metal where the spring gush of the rill had torn the moss from the gravel. About my digging, I must beg to be excused. What if I should happen to drop a handful of that galena into the hole, when your expert was not looking?"

Ignoring the irony, Huxby pulled the shovel from the dugout shelter and gouged into a bed of moss. Mr. Ramill stooped his portly body to pick up the gold pan.

Huxby shoveled clear the moss and black humus from a space two feet or more square. He tossed aside a few stones the size of his fist, and took the gold pan from Mr. Ramill to load it with gravel. They went a few steps down to the edge of a lower pool.

None too deftly, Huxby dipped water into the pan and began to rotate the contents. After more than twice the time an old prospector would have needed for the operation, the mining engineer worked the pan clear of all except a spoonful of small dull nodules.

Miss Ramill had stretched out to bask in the summer warmth. With the upslant of the sun towards the noon of the nineteen-hour day, the breeze had died down. The calm brought a swarm of mosquitoes upslope from the lake shore. The girl put on her headnet, covered the unbooted part of her legs with caribou moss, and resumed her sun bath.

Out of the tail of his eye Garth watched Huxby and Mr. Ramill. When he saw the two get their net-draped heads together over the gold pan, he rose and went towards them. The tread of his moccasins was noiseless. Before the two noticed his approach, he stood looking down over their shoulders.

"Not half bad for a starter," he said. "At least five dollars in your first pan."

"Hardly that value," replied Mr. Ramill. "Admitting there is some platinum in this alloy, I am afraid you're a far too sanguine young man. Call it five per cent platinum and five of gold. That leaves ninety per cent of silver and lead, with of course traces of iridium and osmium."

"Yes, move the decimal point of your million three places to the left, Jack," said Huxby. "It brings your wonderful fortune down to a few thousands. To sluice this placer, freight out the alloy, and pay for separating the metals will leave slim profits. There may be none at all."

"Too bad you've had all your trouble for nothing," Garth replied. "I counted on your finding it a real strike—the first big platinum deposit located in North America."

Mr. Ramill rose to lay a consoling hand on his shoulder.

"Never mind, my boy. You'll recall what I told you about my encouraging worthy prospectors. I stand by that now. I will give you two thousand dollars for this prospect, and take the chance of getting back my money by large-scale placering."

"You're too generous," Garth protested. "I couldn't think of taking your money. In fact, I'll have to own up I had a little testing acid with me when I happened upon this gray alloy. So, as I do not believe in cheating, suppose we head back for the Mackenzie."

The millionaire mine buyer chuckled and clapped him on the back. "Boy, you're a whole lot less a fool than you look."

Huxby stared hard. Then, pocketing the alloy, he went for the shovel. "Good idea," Garth said. "A pan from above Discovery, one below, and the same from three or four hundred feet out each side—they'll tell you whether or not it's merely a small pocket."

Without replying, Huxby set off up the trough. Mr. Ramill limped slowly after him.

Miss Ramill appeared to have fallen asleep. She lay still, protected by her net from the mosquitoes that tinged about her head.

Relieved from the company of his unpleasant travel mates, Garth stretched out like the girl. He thought of the vast length of time that had been required to erode the side of the mountain above him. Nature had spent ages in collecting these hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of precious alloy upon which he now lay basking. And he had chanced to stumble upon the treasure near the end of a trip of which exploration and adventure had been the prime motive and prospecting only a side issue. Now, by law, he was sole owner of all this wealth.

He thought of the two men upslope whom he had brought to share in his good fortune. They had thanked him by seeking to lie and cheat him out of it all. But that was the nature of far too many men. There was no reason to be surprised or angered. They had failed to outplay him with their stacked cards. He looked at a clump of alpine blossoms close beside his elbow, and smiled.

Upslope he heard the swirl of gravel in the gold pan. After a time the sound died out. His keen ear caught the dull tread of heavy feet on the turf. Mr. Ramill turned toward Garth. "We will go back to the plane for lunch while considering the matter."

"Only for a short time," Huxby qualified. "I intend to return here for more sampling. No need of your troubling to join us."

Garth saw that his company was not wanted. "Thanks. I'm not hungry. Come to think, I'll go down to the lake and make sure my old lady grizzly isn't lurking in the bush."

"Your phantom bear," mocked Miss Ramill. "Watch out she doesn't make a ghost of you."

Under cover of his smile at the gibe, Garth caught the glance that passed between her father and Huxby. The girl had said it. "Watch out" was the word.

He swung down the trough with no sign of hurry. The length of his gliding stride made his movements appear leisurely. Without looking back, he slanted in among the scrubby spruces. A mass of the dense evergreens put him out of sight of the three cheechacos up on the open tundra. He turned sharp to the right. Midway down the brush-fringed lake shore, the tall spruces stood well spaced. He broke into a run.

A vista between the trees offered him a view upslope. He halted behind a screen of young aspens to look. The three had already reached the side of the trough. They started to hurry on aslant the mountainside. Lilith Ramill and Huxby had the girl's heavily-bodied father between them. They were helping him along twice as fast as he could have made it without their aid.

Alcohol in Body Cannot Ignite, Chemists Assert

According to popular belief, the body of a person soaked with alcohol is combustible. Cases of the spontaneous combustion of the body have been reported, especially in France, when the first instance of this kind is said to have happened in 1725.

The spontaneous burning of an alcohol-soaked body is a popular belief in Rumania, according to a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Prof. A. Elfer of Cluj, in a lecture before the Hygienic society, is reported by the Bucharest correspondent of the Journal of the American Medical Association as saying that "in past centuries it was earnestly deemed possible that the alcohol laden breath of a tippler may catch fire from the glow of an oven or even from his own pipe."

In 1847, the Countess Gortitz was said to have become ignited spontaneously in Darmstadt, Germany, and burned to death. A commission whose members included the greatest chemical experts of the age, Leibig and Bischoff, studied this case and completely refuted the theory of spontaneous combustion.

You will eat a ton of food this year—2,150 pounds, the statisticians say. Milk, fluid and canned, and other dairy products, will account for half of this. (Milk is heavy.) You will eat about 150 pounds of meat, and about the same amount of fresh fruit; 150 pounds of fresh vegetables, not counting 150 pounds of potatoes.

In bread and cakes and breakfast foods and macaroni, you will consume 230 pounds of flour and cereals. Sugar, 102 pounds of it, is the next most important item. Of canned fruits and vegetables, you will eat 38 pounds, states Today.

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches, or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

The proper treatment for a bilious child

THREE STEPS TO RELIEVING CONSTIPATION
I. A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

ANY mother knows the reason when her child stops playing, eats little, is hard to manage. Constipation. But what a pity so few know the sensible way to set things right!

The ordinary laxatives, of even ordinary strength, must be carefully regulated as to dosage.

A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

The doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. The liquid laxative most families use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Any druggist has it.

UNITED STATES GETS BARGAIN

Lumber, dairy and liquor men of Washington and Oregon are highly upset because competitive Canadian products are to be admitted into their territories on a reduced tariff basis. It is just too bad about them.

The fact is that the treaty must eventually go further still and the tariffs must be even more radically reduced.

With regard to lumber and other primary products, this treaty was only made necessary by outrageous American tariffs that deliberately set out to choke Canadian basic industries to death.

If it had not been the predatory high-handedness of the Fordney-McCumber and Hawley-Smoot tariff scales, which established highly artificial standards of customs duties in the American mind, the present adjusted tariff scale would still appear high.

If Coolidge and Hoover had put a $10 duty on Canadian logs and Roosevelt had cut that duty to $5, these malcontents would still have howled. As it is, any duty, even the present $2, is outlandish.

There is no more chance of a country getting rich on primary products than there is of a man getting rich on day labor.

Money is made on the refinements and manufacture of those products. Thus, even if Canada's raw materials were shipped into United States duty free, from the intelligent American standpoint the influx of these primary products would merely constitute a greater opportunity for American manufacturers to make money in the refinement and manufacture of them.

After all, the Americans have about four billion dollars invested in Canada. If they want to kill that investment they can do it in no better way than by treating Canadians as Mexican peons and endeavoring to trade with them on a bed-and-blanket basis.

In 1929 Canada bought from United States $948 millions' worth of goods and sold $503 millions' worth in return. That makes more than $1400 millions' worth of business.

If that business is worth while, reciprocity is worth while.

Otherwise the two countries must be content with the $430 millions to which their trade shrank under the tariffs of the last five years.

Add to the trade balance the millions which Canada pays United States on borrowed money, and you find Americans trading $2 for $1 with us. Just what kick have they against that?

However, the bawling like spoiled children of a few special interests does not represent the national viewpoint of United States.

There are statesmen in that country who can view the national welfare as a whole and not through the selfish spectacles of a few special interests.

These know that the reciprocal treaty was a sound and necessary step in the progress towards scientific prosperity on the economically unified continent of North America.

They know that United States made a good and profitable bargain. —Vancouver Sun.

Watching Charging Rate

Damage to batteries may result if the generator charging rate is too high. An excessive charging rate has a tendency to cause buckling of battery plates.

When a car is driven a great deal in daytime and only a little at night there is a possibility that the charging rate will be too high. It is advisable to have a reliable service man set the rate to conform with driving conditions.

TONNAGE FOR SMELTERS IS CUT BY NEW MILLS

Concentrate Being Shipped In Place Of Crude Ores From Nelson Area

(From the Vancouver Sun)

Official records of receipts at the Trail Smelter of Consolidated Mining & Smelter Company for the first six months of this year shows a remarkable falling off in tonnage in the custom shippers, especially in the Nelson area.

At first glance it might be inferred that production for that district has shown a precipitate decline but, as a matter of fact, the decrease is due solely to substitution of milling facilities for direct smelter shipments.

During the whole of 1934, seven mines in the Ymir, Sheep Creek and Erie camps shipped a total of 20,713 tons of crude ore, while during the first six months of this year the contribution from but three mines was 557 tons, or at the rate of 1114 tons for the entire year.

Last year's shipments included 4261 tons from Goodenough, now operated by Ymir Consolidated which has just started its new 150-ton amalgamation plant, and 13,966 tons from Yankee Girl, which has shipped nothing since late last year and is now operating a 100-ton plant.

Other shippers were: Kootenay Belle, 824 tons, now operating 50-ton Hadel mill; Gold Belt, 317 tons, now under deep development by North American Mines; Arlington, 408 tons, still under lease and without milling facilities; Granite Poorman, 599 tons, which has also constructed a small milling plant since last year, and Dundee, 308 tons, still shipping crude.

MORE CONCENTRATE

This year the only crude ore shippers have been Dundee, 275 tons, Arlington, 144 tons and Granite-Poorman 133 tons.

Since the first of the year, Nelson district mines have shipped 890 tons of concentrate, indicating total for 1935 of around 2000 tons in place of over 20,000 tons of crude ore shipped last year.

A plethora of silicious ores at the smelter, said to be sufficient for two years' supply, has also affected shipments from the Republic district, which last year contributed 13,890 tons, against 3224 tons for the first six months of this year.

It is doubtful if the Republic total will be raised much if any during the balance of the year, so that decline from this source alone will approximate 10,000 tons.

Independent shipments from Rossland camp have reached 294 tons during the first six months, compared with total of 1726 tons for the whole of 1934. This indicates a decrease of around 1000 tons for the full year.

The Rossland figures do not, however, include shipments of leasers from the mines of Consolidated Mining & Smelting Company, such receipts being included in company account.

SLOCAN INCREASE

Fifteen shippers of silver-lead ore from the Slocan district sent forward 949 tons of crude ore and 209 tons of concentrate in the first six months of the year, indicating total of around 2000 tons of crude for the whole year and over 500 tons of concentrate, a gratifying increase.

The latter figure will in all probability be largely increased by milling operations of Noble Five and Mammoth and greater output of Whitewater, which is enlarging mill.

So far this year 74 shippers have contributed total of 12,240 tons of crude ore and concentrate, indicating total of around 25,000 tons for the full year.

Last year, 148 custom shippers sent forward 47,195 tons, compared with 27,822 tons in 1933.

RAILROADS AFFECTED

While the decreased tonnage will not seriously affect the metal output of Trail smelter, the change from crude shipments to concentrate and bullion has already seriously affected freight receipts of the Great Northern, serving the Ymir, Sheep Creek and Erie districts, and connecting with the C. P. R. system at Nelson.

In fact, there have already been whispers that Great Northern officials were seriously considering abandonment of the line north of Marcus in Washington.

Inroads have also been made into railroad receipts by truck haulage, which is economically possible from all parts of the district except perhaps in the severest winter weather.

LOWER FREIGHT RATES

The situation has caused anxiety throughout the area, but mine operators contend that railroad freight rates, based upon values, are inequitable and efforts have already been made in at least one instance to further cut down costs by cyaniding the entire output of concentrate and thus reducing all production to bullion.

It is understood, however, that railroad officials and mine operators have recently made efforts to get together on acceptable rates, with probability that there will shortly be an important announcement regarding reductions, to be based wholly upon tonnage and irrespective of value.

WEEKLY BULLETIN

By Chief A. P. Chesney

Matches used principally today are called safety matches; not from a standpoint of fire cause, but for the reason that they are not poisonous like the old style black matches.

Needless to say, no match is safe from the standpoint of the fire hazard. Besides the possibility of staying lighted after it is thrown away, the head may fly off when struck or ignition may occur by some other means other than its normal use.

One of the accidental ways of ignition is having them lying around the house loose; one on the floor, and somebody steps on it, may not be noticed until fire gets a good start.

So many fires have been started by matches and carelessness of smokers that the Actuarial Bureau of the National Board of Fire Underwriters combined the hazards under the twin designation "Matches — Smoking." And today it leads all other causes in its responsibility for fire destruction, with a total annual charge of approximately the large sum of thirty million dollars.

SNUG FLOOR BOARDS

Floor boards, mats and other floor coverings in the car should be kept snugly in place at all times.

These coverings help to keep poisonous carbon monoxide fumes from entering the passenger compartment. Such fumes are present in various quantities in the exhaust gas of every car. Being odorless and invisible, the fumes may overcome motorists before they realize they are in danger.

SMOKE IS CLUE

The smoke that comes from the exhaust pipe has a meaning. If it is blue in color it is the product of burning oil which, in turn, means that crankcase lubrication is finding its way into the combustion chamber.

If the oil is of the right viscosity—not too light—it is an indication of worn piston rings. A continuous emission of blue smoke indicates that the rings of each cylinder are equally worn while a periodic puff is a sign that the wear is limited to one or two cylinders.

Carrasco And Vasquez Lead Slugfest In Victory Of Home Team

(By Al Gould)

Creighton Davies, star right handed pitcher ace of the Daly City Tanforan club, just missed having his name inscribed in the hall of fame, Sunday afternoon at the Clubhouse diamond.

Davies set down the league leaders with a nice coat of whitewash, allowing only one safe hit in pitching the local nine to an easy victory in the Recreation AA League.

Captain Carrasco and Johnny Vasquez were easily the stars of the fielding and batting division. Both these boys gathered four hits in four trips to the plate, and played a whale of a game on the field.

The local club is now tied for the league leadership with the Lomita Park Merchants aggregation, with five wins and one loss.

FORD HAS YOUTH IS GOOD FOR OLD

The new 1936 Ford has a decided appeal for the young, both the young in years and the young in heart. It is youthful itself—long, low, sleek, with a flowing streamline; it flashes beauty. Sturdy and rugged Ford can take the hard knocks a young person so loves to give a car.

"For the youngsters in high school or college the Ford V-8 is the ideal automobile," said A. J. Bertini, local Ford dealer. "It is inexpensive to maintain, fast, smartly appointed and is preferred by the boy or girl of today."

"The Christmas holidays are approaching and these young people will be returning from everywhere. Nothing could do more to make 1935 an unforgettable Christmas than a present of a 1936 Ford V-8."

"In fact, a 1936 Ford V-8 would bring lasting appreciation for the whole family. Mother will like its ease of handling and roominess; father will like its economy and serviceability; son and daughter will like its smooth performance and smartness. The Ford V-8 is truly a car for the whole family."

"This is the first year that it is possible to make a new Ford V-8 a really up-to-date Christmas present, for in the past the releasing of all new models has been after the first of the year. But Christmas for 1935 will be different. You can put a 1936 Ford V-8 on your 1935 Christmas Tree. The 1936 Ford V-8 is strikingly new, already has received its public blessing in showrooms and at auto shows all over the country. The 1936 models have proven their worth and are ready for your Christmas."

"The motorist who buys a 1936 Ford V-8 now buys himself not only a merry Michaelmas, but many a merry day to come."

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, De-nounced" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon Sunday, December 1, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The Golden Text will be: "Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts: and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting" (Ps. 139: 23, 24). Other Bible citations will include: "Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise. For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness. And again, The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain" (I Cor. 3:18-20).

The Lesson-Sermon will also include the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy: "The corporeal senses are the only sources of evil or error. . . . Outside the material sense of things, all is harmony. . . . Mortal belief would have the material senses sometimes good and sometimes bad" (p. 489).

PROTECT GIRL; DON'T SMOTHER SELF-RELIANCE

Who says today's girl has too much freedom? A writer in a recent issue of The Parents' Magazine declares that the daughter of the average American family is really the most sheltered of human beings; submits to being supervised and controlled far beyond her brothers. She queries the wisdom of this in a changing world where the position of women is, perhaps, more uncertain than ever before in the history of the human race.

"As boys approach the long-pants age they take unto themselves, with the tacit approval of their parents, all sorts of personal prerogatives relating to their choice of friends, the places they go, the way in which they spend their leisure," says the writer. "At college no one cares what time a boy gets up or goes to bed, where he goes, or how he puts in time outside the classroom. But his sister goes from the shelter of home to an authority to whom she must constantly account for nearly every detail of her life."

"Are parents afraid home training may be less effective for girls than for boys? Are feminine characters weaker? Are there greater dangers in the world for girls than for boys?" the writer asks, and reveals test cases that convince her that parents dread automobile accidents and the results of undisciplined love affairs for their girls.

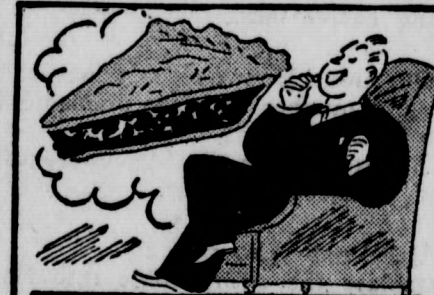

What about the boys? Are they immune to either? The courts would not say so. Neither would the progressive educators who are constantly urging more freedom for the girl that she may become as self-reliant as her brothers. It is impossible to guard against every form of human misbehavior by defining and forbidding it, they say, and refer to statistics to prove that girls sow fewer and tamer "wild oats" than their brothers, are more cautious and conservative in their behavior, and accept responsibility with greater earnestness.

When all is done and said, what do we bring our children up for if not to make them competent citizens, boys or girls well rounded individuals able to cope with the world? In the shelter of home or in the small world of the campus there is good opportunity to experiment with responsibility which begins with one self.

CO-OP MEETING THIS EVENING IN CARPENTERS HALL

All roads will lead to Carpenter's Hall, 112 Valencia street, on this Friday evening, November 29, where Kate Richards O'Hare will lecture on "Co-operatives"—their history and development. Her state-wide experience in the so-called "barter" movement enables her to speak from first-hand knowledge, and makes her an authority on "self-help" of every kind and nature.

Colleges and universities were but stag institutions before the entrance of women. What is true of the "co-ed" schools, is likewise true of the "self-help" movement. With the entrance of women like Mrs. O'Hare, they have truly become "co-op" institutions, giving them the feminine touch of humanitarianism.

The forthcoming lecture is under the auspices of the Producers-Consumers Co-op and the various Epic and Democratic clubs in San Francisco. It is primarily for the purpose of acquainting the general public with the present status of the co-operative movement in California, and how it could be made the channel for helping the unemployed to help themselves, and incidentally help bring about permanent prosperity for all the people.

Remember the date: This Friday, November 29; the place: Carpenters' Hall, 112 Valencia street; and the speaker: Kate Richards O'Hare, nationally known lecturer.

Miss Genevieve Johnson and Ben Haubrich were spectators at the Big Game at Palo Alto, Saturday afternoon of last week.

The Fall Festival, held for the benefit of Holy Angels Church, Friday evening of last week, was enjoyed by all who attended. The play "Be Yourself" offered a wealth of humor and amusement and could scarcely have better acted by professionals themselves. Adolph Bertini won the five-dollar door prize and a Miss Kohler was winner of the $10 raffle.

The directors of the Colma Community Center have disclosed plans for holding monthly afternoon whists regularly after the beginning of the new year. The date of the first one will be announced at a later time.

KEEPING RIGHT IS PRIME SAFETY RULE TO USE

Motorists are required by law to drive as closely as practicable to the right hand edge of the roadway, except when overtaking and passing another car or when preparing to make a left turn. Many fatal and otherwise serious traffic accidents are directly caused by failure to obey this law. Keeping to the right and other important safety requirements for motorists are being stressed in connection with a series of efforts to promote safe driving.

Motorists are required by law to pass to the right of another car moving in the same direction on the open highway is a violation of the law. Such passing is permissible only on city streets wide enough for two lanes of traffic to move in each direction.

Motorists are required by law before changing from one lane to another, or making any change in direction, to first ascertain that they can do so in reasonable safety.

The law requires motorists to pull over to the right to allow an overtaking car to pass upon being signalled by the sound of a horn or other audible warning. Even though a motorist is traveling at the legal maximum of forty-five miles per hour he must give way to the overtaking car. Violators of this rule are commonly termed "road hogs."

On three-lane highways the car first to move into the center lane for the purpose of passing another car has the right of way but must return to the right hand lane after passing.

The primary safety rule is that of keeping to the right as far as reasonably possible at all times.

Teacher: "Will you boys in the back of the room please stop exchanging notes?"

Student: "Them ain't notes, them's dollar bills. We're shooting craps."

Teacher: Oh, pardon me."

YOUTH AND BEAUTY

"Won't you come along with me?" says the smile in the picture, "and we'll tour the town properly in Ford's swank roadster for 1936." Youthful, fast, sturdy, easy to handle—the Ford roadster is just what the college boy or girl has in mind for dashing about the campus.

ROMANTIC FILM OF MISSISSIPPI STARS ROGERS

Laughter and tears, comedy and near-tragedy follow each other in quick succession and bring drama and suspense to Will Rogers' rousing picture of Mississippi steamboat life, "Steamboat Round the Bend," which comes to the Daly City Theater for three days, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 28, 29 and 30.

Two unusual entertainment elements combine to make the great and moving story of "Steamboat Round the Bend." One is the laugh-filled rivalry of Will Rogers and Irvin S. Cobb, America's two greatest humorists, as the crusty captains of competing boats; the other is the wistful and tender romance of Anne Shirley and John McGuire.

McGuire is a river pilot, nephew of Rogers who owns the "Claremore Queen." In a quarrel over Anne Shirley he kills another man in self-defense.

Rogers is hostile to the girl because of the trouble she has brought to McGuire. But, when the boy is condemned to hang, their love for him draws them together in the fight to save him.

They join in the struggle to get money for the boy's appeal and to find a missing witness who can save him.

But the great thrill is saved for the last, when Rogers' boat is involved in the great race down to New Orleans as he is hurrying to save his nephew. How Rogers manages to beat pompous old Cobb and his "Pride of Paducah," and at the same time save the boy, is revealed in a surprise-filled climax.

The other attraction is "The Perfect Clue," with David Manners and Dorothy Libaire.

"STUDENT PRINCE" AT CURRAN THEATER

The thumping of beer mugs; the snap of salutes; the click of heels and the deep gusto of "the drinking song" will again resound through the Curran Theater (San Francisco) on Monday night, December 2 when "The Student Prince" begins a short return engagement.

"The Student's Serenade," "Just We Two," "Deep In My Heart" and "Golden Days" will again be played to the strains of cello and violin, with the added notes of cornets to give them fervor and zip.

The male chorus will again be on the stage, representing life and enthusiasm and who can ever forget those glorious melodies.

"The Student Prince" stands today as the most popular operetta ever written. Its success throughout the English speaking world has eclipsed that of any other known work of its kind.

The production, most brilliant presentation of "The Student Prince" yet to reach San Francisco, will be under the personal direction of J. J. Shubert. Superb costumes, a magnificent singing chorus and a brilliant cast of principals from Broadway will make the production at the Curran outstanding.

Meanwhile "Blossom Time" the thrillingly beautiful musical romance of Franz Schubert, drenched with the beauty of the immortal Schubert music, is thrilling audiences at the Curran. "Blossom Time" entered its final week Monday night, November 25. It will close Saturday night, November 30.

LOCAL PASTOR TO BROADCAST

Rev. John R. Stevenson of Grace Presbyterian Church, Hanover and Evergreen, will broadcast over KYA on Sunday afternoon, 4:30 to 5 o'clock, December 1.

NEIGHBOR WON'T YOU PLEASE HELP

The following appeal from the County Social Welfare Department is printed with the hope it will bring greater response than at any previous time:

Sad scenes are observed as families daily crowd the offices of the County Social Welfare Department, at Redwood City, pleading for shoes, clothing and garments of every kind.

The stories told of hardships and suffering for the want of bodily protection tug at the very heart strings of every attaché of the department.

Mothers with little children and babies in arm tearfully ask for clothes for their loved ones. With the cold chill days already at hand, and winter fast approaching, shoes and garments of every description are sorely needed.

While the people of San Mateo County have always generously contributed to every charitable cause, and enjoy a reputation second to none for the caring of their less fortunate sisters and brothers, this appeal is being made by your County Social Welfare Department, that little children and grown-ups, now existing on the bare necessities of life, may go through the winter assured of an ample supply of warm clothing.

Dear neighbor, won't you please look over your cast-off garments, and notify the County Social Welfare Department, Redwood City, what you can safely spare. We will gladly call at your home, upon receipt of a letter or telephone call.

Any shoes, clothing, etc., you may donate will be gratefully received, and will assure with the warmth of your hearts the warmth and comfort of your now suffering neighbors and their children.

Please help.
